

Washington, D. C.

WAR IN SOUTH AMERICA

Most Americans have been so engrossed in the World War that if you told them war was brewing right here in the Western Hemisphere, they never would believe it.

Yet, buzzing backstage in the Washington diplomatic corps has been a growing, worrying reverberation over the ultimate danger of war between Argentina and Chile—not this year, perhaps not next year, but before very long.

Additional attention was focused on the unhappy situation with Argentina's bid for a conference of Pan-American foreign ministers—on an obvious move to put the U. S. A. on the spot and force recognition of the Fascist Farrell militarist government in Argentina.

The whole tangled diplomatic controversy between Argentina, the United States and other neighbors is so involved that it takes an expert to understand it. But out of the mess emerges these basic and alarming facts:

1 — Argentina is rushing armament. Hedy Lamarr's former husband, Fritz Mandel, the Austrian munitions king, about whom "Idiot's Delight" was written, is busy building airplanes for Argentina night and day.

2 — Argentina could bomb Santiago, capital of Chile, from Mendoza, just across the Andes, in 40 minutes. It would take five hours for Chile to bomb Buenos Aires, capital of Argentina.

3 — The people of Chile today are worried sick over Argentina. The Socialist, Communist and Conservative parties, usually vigorously divergent, are now united on this. They fear that the Argentine Fascists, looking for means of keeping themselves in power, as Hitler did with the German people, will make a Czechoslovakia out of Chile.

Brazilians Admire Argentina.

Other Latin Americans are divided. Paraguay, Bolivia, Peru sympathize with Argentina. Officially Brazil does not. But actually the Brazilian people, plus many of the Brazilian army, are rooting sympathetically for the one country south of the Rio Grande which has successfully thumbed its nose at the Colossus of the North and got away with it.

Nothing succeeds like success, especially in the Latin American mind. The state department adopted only halfway measures with Argentina; snubbed her diplomatically, but made her prosperous economically by continuing to buy meat. The Argentines didn't care much if they were snubbed as long as they were prosperous.

Result is that many "good neighbors," though not liking Argentine Fascism, enjoy seeing U. S. diplomacy come to grief.

NOTE — Meanwhile, the United States is less equipped to handle things in our own hemisphere than ever before in two decades. Secretary Hull is sick. His best Latin American experts were friends of Sumner Welles and were given the gate after Welles resigned.

CONCERNING THE WAR'S END

A lot of people have tried their hand at predicting the war's end, including this columnist. Some were high-up officials, some private prognosticators. Some were pretty good, some pretty bad.

Rep. Earl Wilson, Indiana Republican, in June, 1943, got an average compilation from 140 congressmen that the war would be over in October, 1944.

Adm. William F. Halsey, who predicted "complete, absolute defeat for the Axis in 1943," was asked again, on December 13, 1943, and "wasn't so sure when the war would be over."

Gen. "Hap" Arnold, chief of the air forces, on February 14, 1943, predicted "the German war will be over by February 14, 1944."

Jim Farley, on January 20, 1943, "The war will be over this year."

Gen. Levin Campbell, January 15, 1943—"The war will be over in about two years."

Herbert Hoover, November 6, 1943—"Certainly we are now in the last stages of the war."

Raymond Moley, November 8, 1943, predicted end of the war "earlier than envisioned by the administration."

Senator O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat, January 2, 1944: "The most conservative Swedish observers do not believe that Germany can endure beyond next June."

Sun Fo, president of the legislative Yuan of China, January 2, 1944: "Germany will be knocked out between the spring and summer of this year."

Henry Ford, March 20, 1944, predicted war would be over in two months.

Senator McKellar of Tennessee, July 21, 1944: "The Red army will be in Berlin in 60 days. The war will be over on all fronts in six months."

Congressman May, Democrat, Kentucky, July 28, 1944: "Germany will capitulate by December 1."

Campbell Legion Auxiliary Post No. 596 Instituted

Wednesday evening, November 8th, at a beautiful and impressive ceremony, Mrs. Gladys Dower, President of the 13th District, instituted Campbell Auxiliary No. 596. Forty-nine charter members were initiated. Following the initiation, Mrs. Dower, assisted by her officers, installed the new officers. Those taking office for the first time were: President, Evabelle Fuller; 1st vice-president, Gertrude Wood; 2nd vice president, Arah Peck; Chaplain, Beatrice Smith; Historian, Miriam Smith; Secretary, Janice Bohnett; Treasurer, Edith Morley; Sgt. at Arms, Grace Lee; Marshall, Isabelle Price; Musician, Irene Farnham; and the three committee women, Bertha Jensen, Grace Gardner and Bertha Farnham.

Representatives present from the Los Gatos War Mothers' and Auxiliary, Willow Glen, Santa Clara, Memory and No. 899 presented their congratulations and gifts to the president, Evabelle Fuller, who responded most graciously. Also present, in a body, was the Campbell Post No. 596, to welcome its new Auxiliary. President Rex Fuller, introduced Legionnaire Howard Smith, who presented the Auxiliary with a beautiful silk flag. Mrs. Clara Fagalde accepted the flag for the post and the president dedicated it.

Mrs. Dower then introduced her officers from the floor. She also called upon Lillie Brannaman, state first vice president, who gave an inspiring talk on the duties and aims of each auxiliary post.

As a surprise, Rex Fuller presented Mrs. Fuller with his own personal gift, a beautiful gavel, a gift highly prized, as the myrtle wood was sent by her sister, who lives in Oregon. Inset in the wood was Mrs. Fuller's original Auxiliary pin.

Notables of the Legion who gave brief messages were Adj. Whiteman of Santa Cruz, Jay Harris, 13th district commander, and Sidney Brannaman, 13th district vice commander.

Upon adjournment Legion Post 596 served refreshments in the banquet room of IOOF hall. A beautiful birthday cake was presented and served.

Campbell Auxiliary No. 596 will meet the second and fourth Wednesdays at 8 p. m. in Community hall. Visitors will receive a cordial welcome. Next meeting Nov. 22.

Sgt. "Lefty" Fulton Fights in Gothic Line In Italy

With the Fifth Army, Italy—S/Sgt. Ralph "Lefty" Fulton, crew chief, serving with the 53rd Signal Battalion now in its 27th month overseas, is fighting in the Gothic Line on the Fifth Army front in Italy.

Sailing from England with II Army Corps, the signalmen fought their way ashore at Arzew, Northern Algeria on D-Day. Three days later, following capitulation of French forces which had at first resisted fiercely, the 53rd entered Oran.

During the Tunisian campaign, when the corps was operating as an army, the battalion shouldered the full burden of providing communication for II Corps.

In the Sicilian campaign, the 53rd served again with II Corps, which battered its way from Scoglitti to Messina to bring the campaign to a successful conclusion.

Landing at Paestum, the unit began its fourth campaign by enduring three months of bitter mountain fighting in Southern Italy. Later the battalion was relieved at Cassino to participate in the big spring offensive.

The 53rd was still with II Corps when it charged across the lower Garigliano river northwest of Minturno, reached the beleaguered 5th Army forces of the beachhead around Anzio a fortnight later and ten days after that moved into Rome. In recognition of its services in maintaining corps communications despite swiftly changing tactical situations, the unit received the 5th Army Plaque and Clasp from II Corps Commander Major General Geoffrey Keyes, who presented it for Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commanding general of the 5th Army.

Lt.-Col. Albert E. Carlson leads the 53rd Signal Battalion, which is now engaged in maintaining communications beyond Futa Pass, which fell to the men of II Corps.

Sgt. Fulton is the son of Hugh Fulton and brother of Mrs. Warren B. Whitmore of this city.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Lett, Lowell Way, a boy, Freddie Martin, November 7, at O'Connor sanitarium.

All of Campbell is mourning the tragic death of First Lieut. Hugh Grant Cramer, M. D., who was one of the 11 whose lives were snuffed out in the crash of an army transport plane on Strawberry peak in the Angelus national forest near Los Angeles, Saturday night.

Lt. Cramer was returning to Camp Maxey, Texas, where he was attached to the 125th evacuation hospital and expected to leave soon for overseas service. He had accompanied his wife home following her visit at his post and had spent the time here with her and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Cramer.

Hugh was born in Campbell Feb. 26, 1916, attended local schools, graduating in 1934 and going to Stanford for his medical course after two years at San Jose State. He received his M. D. from Stanford in 1943 after interning at the Santa Clara county hospital, and then was resident physician at the Monterey county hospital in Salinas when called by the army medical corps last July.

On March 20, 1943, he was married to Barbetta "Polly" Browne, who has been completing her training for registered nurse at the county hospital.

The death of Dr. Cramer has taken from the world not only a fine young physician, but one admired and loved by all who knew him personally and professionally. He was gifted with an unusually fine singing voice and had always been gracious in using it in church worship and for entertainment of friends and organizations. He was president of the Stanford Glee club in his senior year.

Besides his wife and parents Lieut. Cramer is survived by his brother, First Lieut. Harold Davidson Cramer, M. D., also in the army medical corps, now serving in England.

Funeral arrangements will be completed later. The young doctor's wife and mother have gone to Los Angeles to accompany the remains to San Jose.

Harry G. Evans Takes Bride

United in marriage recently in San Jose were Harry Grant Evans, formerly of Campbell and Miss Clara Paul of New York.

The Rev. Lauren A. Lundblad officiated at the ceremony performed in the Immanuel Lutheran church.

A wedding dinner was served at the home of Evans' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Evans in that city.

The bride has gone east to visit her parents and the groom, who is in the navy is again on duty overseas.

This week's blood donors from Campbell were Mesdames Hazel Kennedy, Bonnie Silberbauer, Carrie Thiehoff, Everett Nelson, Ellen Arnold, Ruth Zimmer, Mildred Applegarth, Jewell Gresham, Miss Mary Irene Parr, J. F. Levenberg and Kenneth E. Downing. Thru an oversight the last previous list of donors was not published in the Campbell Press.

Anderson Thanks His Supporters

Today, (Tuesday), as I leave for Washington to resume my duties as the representative in Congress from the 8th district of California, I want to express my deep appreciation for the fine vote of confidence I received from the people I represent. My victory at the polls would not have been possible if it had not been for the active support of the newspapers throughout the district and the volunteer efforts of my many good friends. The results have convinced me that the voters are interested in maintaining independent unbiased and impartial representation in their national legislature.—Jack Z. Anderson.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Revenge Is Sweet—But Expensive

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

When we were married I had known Bob almost a year, but it was a year of dancing and dates—no serious thought ever bothered us.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

WE WERE married in October, two years ago," writes Betty Pearson from Oklahoma. "We had four happy months in a little place near camp, in Florida, then Bobby went off to Guadalcanal. Immediately afterward I could write him that there was to be a baby; I was wretchedly sick, but very happy and excited about it, although I have no parents or home, and was holding a defense-plant job.

"Bobby's reception of my news shook the ground under my feet and for days I was miserable and crying. He hated the idea of a child, he didn't want it; there must be something I could do to get rid of it. I wasn't awfully smart to have gotten myself into this fix. It meant the end of our dancing and fun—in short, he said everything that could make me mad and break my heart.

"The letter stunned me, but I wrote briefly and coldly that nothing on earth would persuade me to destroy my hopes of motherhood and that the first minute he got home he could get a divorce if he wanted one. Then there was a long silence, but last Christmas he sent me a shawl, and a tiny red embroidered cap, but no message to Margaret.

"I pulled myself together, had my baby in a ward, joined a woman friend whose husband also is overseas. Her mother keeps house for us, minds my baby mornings. I am on a night shift and can take Margaret out in the afternoons and put her to bed. We all adore her, everything works smoothly, and I never have been so happy in my life.

"Now comes a letter from Bob. He has lost all but the thumb from his left hand, and is discharged. He is coming home. His letter says, 'I want you to look out for a little place for us—the kid, too, I suppose. Maybe I can get my job back, but it looks as if I'd be doing dishes and washing baby-clothes for awhile. Somehow I never looked forward to my wife's supporting me, but it's only for a while.'

"His letter sounds so discouraged and bitter that I simply dread meeting him again. More than that the thought of his maimed hand sickens me; I have always had a perfect horror of physical disfigurement. If I break up this present arrangement what other can I make? I've read your letters to service wives and mothers, asking them to make provision for the boys' homecoming, but I have my child to think of, too; what is best for her? Her Daddy didn't want her and doesn't know her. We have not an inch to spare, even if it would be pleasant to have a man in the house. We have one bedroom; Emily's mother sleeps on the livingroom couch, and Margaret's crib is moved every right into the kitchen. This arrangement suits us perfectly, but a man's presence is unthinkable.

"When we were married I had known Bob almost a year, but it was a year of dancing and dates—no serious thought ever bothered us.

UNDERSTANDING

One of the hard but necessary tasks growing from the war is the understanding of changed dispositions of loved ones who have endured the upsetting rigors of military life.

Although seemingly changed as a result of their experiences, in reality they are inwardly quite the same, their attitude being a reflection of the hard grating of the shock of war against their ordinary dispositions.

To be able to restore their sense of tolerance, to bring back their balance of judgment, is a task that will lead to a renewal of the old, happy life, the kind of life that makes this a perfectly natural world.

This task is a negligible one compared to the sacrifices made by those gallant loved ones of ours all over the world.

He was just one of the crowd; when he was drafted he asked me to marry him and quite naturally I did. Four months later he was gone out of my life again, and that was 18 months ago. Bob's job before the war was with a farm machinery company; he was a good salesman, popular, good-looking, amusing. But he seems to have changed completely. Please give real thought to my happiness—my rights in this matter before you answer me. Of course I want you to say, 'Have a long talk, agree to a divorce; go your separate ways.' But I will be influenced by what you advise whatever it is."

Sees Happy Outcome.

It seems to me, Betty, that there is material for a happy outcome here, without the inescapable unpleasantness of a divorce. You mustn't be too deeply influenced by what Bob wrote you when he knew the baby was coming. Perhaps he was lonely, homesick, mosquito-bitten, weary, longing for the old serene happiness of his girl and his little Florida bungalow. Perhaps he was worrying about money; wondering how long it would be before he could get the right job after the war, take the right care of you. Perhaps it stunned him to think of you facing so great a responsibility and he wrote hastily, not phrasing his letter tactfully, not waiting to think things over. The thought of that little red cap somehow touches me. That may have been a peace offering to his little girl.

Since you have no room for him, have you some motherly woman friend who could take you, all three, into her home for a week or two? Or perhaps Emily and her mother would move out, and give you and Bob a chance to make each other's acquaintance again. You owe him a real welcome; affection and reassurance and a week of home life may work a miracle in him; if once he was "popular, good-looking, amusing," he can be so again. Try to reestablish that happy little Florida home.

Brain Food

Since sugar is a "brain food"; a sugar meal taken in the form of candy during the day will help maintain cerebral efficiency.

This was the statement made before the recent meeting of the American society of zoologists by Dr. T. Cunliffe Barnes, Philadelphia scientist. Studies of brain waves shows that the amount of sugar in the blood, he said, controls the frequency and amplitude of the electric potential demonstrated to exist in the brain.

His letter sounds so discouraged and bitter that I simply dread meeting him

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"FOREVER AMBER" by Kathleen Winsor.

Joseph Henry Jackson, the renowned and popularly read book reviewer, whose "Book World" appears in the San Francisco Chronicle on Sundays, heralded the arrival of this book with glamorous phrases and predicted a future for Amber coincidental with Margaret Mitchell's Scarlet O'Hara.

Amber put in her appearance in the library a few days ago. And even before she arrived, requests for the book were numerous and the list lengthens with each day's setting sun. I have met Amber and have learned all that the able and attractive young writer, Kathleen Winsor, has to say about her. Oh, me! Oh, My! Some book.

Amber's life began in the year 1644. In Marygreen, a small village a short distance from London, she lived her early childhood. At her birth, Amber's mother died, leaving her in the household of an aunt and an uncle. At the age of fourteen she left Marygreen for London, for life, for fame and for fortune. Amber misses nothing.

This is not a book of historical facts for the sake of history; rather it is a book on the spirit of the times. The time is the Restoration period and the reign of Charles the II.

This is the author's first book, and if during her life time she never writes another, as the author of "Forever Amber" she will not soon be forgotten.

She was born in Olivia, Minnesota, but has lived most of her life in Berkeley, California, where she graduated from the University in 1938. While in college, she married her classmate, Robert John Herwig, a native Californian who will be remembered as center on the All-American football teams of 1936 and 1937. Interestingly enough, it was her husband's homework which started her writing "Forever Amber." He had been assigned a paper on the death of Charles II, and she, picking up one of his books, became fascinated by the Restoration.

Miss Winsor has the greatest of all gifts for the historical novelist—the ability to tell a story, to move from climax to climax. Her plot is daring; the central character is superb, and her honest, graphic background puts her book head and shoulders above all other recent novels.

Trifles discover character more than actions of seeming importance; what one is in little things he is also in great. —Dean Swift.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

THIS is the story of three actresses who brought the home front right into your home. Primarily, however, it's the tale of one star who had the courage to depart from ingenue leads — who took a chance at a mother role and then found herself mothering two other stars in real life as well.

This is the behind-the-scenes story of Claudette Colbert, Jennifer Jones, and Shirley Temple in "Since You Went Away" — a combination that is smashing box office records across the land. Every time a story breaks about how well "Since You Went Away" is doing I feel like going up to David Selznick and giving him a pat on the back — not alone for the picture, but for taking my advice and casting Claudette as mother.

It all started one day while David was scouting around for a top star to play the heroine of the home front — mother.

"Why don't you get Claudette Colbert for it?" I asked.

"She wouldn't consent," he countered.

Subtle, Wot?

"Let me run a little yarn that you want her for it and we'll get her reaction," I said.

D. O. S. agreed.

Next day I came out with a story. At 8:30 a. m. sharp Claudette had me on the phone. She wanted to know where in the devil I had gotten such an idea — what ever gave me the notion that she would consider playing the mother of a couple of girls that old?

Then I went to work on her. "David Selznick doesn't make anything but good pictures, does he?" I asked.

"Well, no."

"You don't expect to be an ingenue all your life, do you?"

"Well, no."

"You're an actress, aren't you?"

"I've been accused of it."

"Well, why don't you think it over?"

"All right, but Selznick hasn't asked me yet."

"He will," I replied. She was receptive and asked to see a script. Naturally, at that stage of the game there was none.

Claudette called me. "I've never taken or accepted a part without reading the script first. What if it isn't suitable for me?"

"Listen, Claudette," I said. "This is going to be a big picture. Selznick doesn't make failures. He can't afford to make anything but a success — and to do that it's got to be just right for you as well as the others."

Claudette agreed, and the deal was set.

Another Problem

From the first Jennifer was worried. She didn't feel she was photographing quite as well as she might in certain scenes.

Selznick went to Claudette with his problem, and Claudette took over the mother reins in real life as well as on the screen.

"You're a great actress, Jennifer," Claudette told her, "and you're going to be greater. Why don't you just concentrate on doing a good job and let the cameraman take care of his?"

Jennifer did just that. Then we have the case of Claudette's other "daughter" — Shirley Temple.

Here was a girl who had been No. 1 star of her previous pictures, also No. 1 at the box office. In this one she had to share that billing with six other performers.

Shirley did a sweet job of adjusting herself to this new condition. But the mothering she received on the set from Claudette had a lot to do with making Shirley a better actress.

Claudette Colbert, Jennifer Jones and Shirley Temple make a fine trio on the screen. You get a feeling that there is real unity in the Hilton home. The kind of unity the boys overseas want to come home to.

Sol Has Right Idea

Sol Lesser is signing up Agnes De Mille for his next, "Crazy to Dance." The story is woven about a couple of kids who start dancing in school and grow up to become as famous as Velox and Yolanda. He's trying to get a big name for it, and has already talked to several big band leaders. . . . I'm happy to report that Martha Scott is achieving something like a personal triumph as a comedienne (for a change) in "Sol-dier's Wife" on Broadway.

Anything but the Truth

By ETHELYN PARKINSON
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

MISS Kitty Herrick and Miss Patty Lou Lee wished they were in swimming. But since Lieutenant Gavin Cornwall simply loathed athletic women, they lay quietly on the beach, clad in sun hats, goggles, lipsticks and the briefest of sun suits. "It's false pretense to act like a house plant, darling," Kit was saying. "When you're really the best girl athlete in our high school."

"No one here knows that," Patty said. "Besides, anything goes — in love!"

"Anything but the truth, darling! And I wonder if it's love!" Kit sat up suddenly. "Look, Pat — competition!" A tall, blond girl was striding up the hotel steps. "Smooth," Kit observed.

"She's simply all muscles," Pat replied. "If Gavin looks at her twice, I'll eat my sun hat!" At that moment the door opened and Lieutenant Cornwall barged out. Stepping aside to let the blonde pass, he stood gazing after her.

"We-ell!" Kit whispered. "You'll admit he never looked at you that way, darling."

"Listen, Kit," Pat said, "that gal seems familiar. Let's go peek at the register."

"Miss Eugenia Williams," Kit read. "Mean anything, Pat?"

"No . . . but she looks familiar."

"Oh, forget it! It's two o'clock. Your precious Gavin will be taking his nap. Let's sneak a swim."

The girls went around the bluff, out of sight. When they trailed back, Gavin was on the porch. "Think I'll go in for a coke," Pat said.

But just then Eugenia Williams strolled across the piazza and into the refreshment bar. After her went Gavin. Kit grinned. "Too late, Pat!"

Pat's eyes narrowed. "Kit," she whispered, "let's have a look at her room. I'll investigate while you stand sentry."

As a detective Pat was triumphant. "Tennis rackets, golf clubs, hiking boots! And on the flyleaf of a book — 'Love to Speed!'"

"Speed!" Kit's eyes popped.

"Then she's —"

"She's Speed Williams, the swimming star. Sh! Here she comes!" They met her as they walked down the hall. "We were just going to call on you, Miss Williams. We're Kit Herrick and Pat Lee."

Eugenia Williams smiled. "Come in, girls. Have a chocolate."

Kit glanced around the room.

"Play tennis, Miss Williams?"

"Love to! But —"

"Golf?" Pat inquired sweetly.

"Nothing I enjoy more, except swimming. But —"

Pat sighed. "I wish I were athletic. But there's one advantage, Gavin Cornwall simply loathes athletic girls! When he was twelve, a ten-year-old girl saved his life in the water. It gave him a complex."

"I see," Eugenia nervously picked up a book. "Well, to tell the truth, I'm not going to be very active while I'm here. Doctor's orders. No swimming at all."

"I think you'd better tell Gavin who Eugenia is, darling," Kit observed a week later. "They've had all those movies and rides and walks. And they do look right chummy, reading together on the beach."

Pat sat up. "Look," she cried. They watched, electrified, as Eugenia climbed to the diving platform. Her beautiful body struck the water cleanly. She swam out —

Pat clutched Kit's arm. "Kit! What'll you bet that crook screams for help?" And just then, as if it were timed, Eugenia screamed. Gavin dashed into the surf. "Good," Pat whispered darkly. "Wait till he knows Speed Williams has made a monkey of him."

The next morning, Pat, primed and perfumed, was waiting on the veranda when Kit appeared. "Toddle on, Kit. I'm waiting for Gavin."

"Gavin! But —"

"I phoned him in his room. Told him I simply had to talk to him for his own good! He said he had a little business first —"

Eugenia Williams' voice came from somewhere around the corner. "I'm sorry, Gavin. I — I just couldn't swim."

"How utterly crooked!" Pat whispered. "Just wait till he finds out who she is."

But Gavin was barking: "No one can swim with cramps! You were purple, Eugenia! Your pulse was almost gone! Why go in the water if your doctor tells you not to?"

"They told me you didn't like athletic girls, Gavin. I had to let you know that I — well, I —"

"That you're Speed Williams? I knew it all the time!" Gavin growled. "I've followed your career since I was twelve. Ever since you saved my skin and made me deathly afraid of girl athletes." His voice dropped. "Until I found you could be just as helpless — need me just as much, darling —"

Kit giggled hysterically. "Telling the truth! Both of 'em! Such lack of finesse! So crooked! Where you going, Pat?"

Pat tossed her head. "I'm having a good swim, tennis, golf and a hike before luncheon. Join me?"

"For everything but lunch," Kit giggled. "Because for lunch, darling, I guess you'll be eating a sun hat!"

"Won't you give my boy a chance to get home?"
